In yesterday's issue we reproduced an account by the Shanghai correspondent of the Journal des Débats of a conversation beld with a Taotai in June last. In it, the Chinese official is made to say, in reply to the query whether he thought the English would try to neutralise the advantages secured by the Franco-Chinese treaty of commerce, "It is their dearest wish, and I may tell you, with regard to that, that if England consents to make a sacrifice to our policy she will do so only to secure an end she esteems of the highest value, namely, liberty for her trade to pavigate the West River, in the two pro-5990 vioces of Kwangtung and Kwangsi, and the right to have a consulate at Pe-se, the most important town in that region, for it situated at the point where the West River (the Si-kiang) becomes navigable and the centre whence radiate all routes running on the one side to Shan States, Yunnan, and Burmah, and on the other towards the Blue River 6642 6649 6658 It is the market for the whole export and import trade of southern China." He went 6809 6817 6826 on to state in answer to another interrogation that China refused to grant the same right to France; it was reserved for the month; 9.80 and 7.50 failing on the 25th and the English as a compensation. When asted if he thought the official recognition by England of Chinese suzerainty over Burmah | 25th and 26th respectively 7274 | would have important consequences in China. the Taotai answered in the affirmative, adding:-" It is a very important act which will not fail to be remarked, by our mandarins, composed of all those who regret that China has lost her suzerainty over Annam. Do you know that if your Government had consented to acknowledge this right-for ours is a right—there never would have been war Captain R. H. Harris (flagship of Vice-Admiral of France in Tonquin and Annam would have been exactly the same? China only 8232 8288 made war in the hope of maintaining her B. Bromley. right. It would have been very easy to have 8344 arranged this; and England will accept the arrangement without doubt, for the advantages she will gain by her intelligent submis-

It no doubt would be the policy of For the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking a Chinese official to magnify the concession made by England to China in regard to the continuance of the decennial tribute Chief Accountant from Burmah and to try and impress the rejecting China's suzersinty over Annam.

We think, however, the Taotai aforesaid somewhat exaggerates the benefits which he avers England will resp from her acknowledgment of the suzersin rights of the Son says:- "The cargo of the British tes ship Zoroya, tion with other gentlemen. Pe-so has been put forward by the British Government, Indeed, England has never as all her outlay in opening China-from the Poking Government. We doubt, moreover, she is well adapted. whether any special benefit would result from the establishment of a British Consulate at the town named. We are sincerely anxious to see The Vade Meann for every Resident in the the river Chukinng and its three great branches opened up to trade, but it is as well that no delusions should be formed on the subject of Pê-se. This city lies on the aper formed by two branches of the West River, one running north, and the other west: it is almost on the borders of Yunnan, and is at the bead of the navigation. It would not be possible, however, for very light draught steamers to get up to Pô-se, even during the summer, owing to the rapids. Mr. Colquious thinks that light draught steamers might ascend the river half way to this place, some four hundred miles. Pe-se is a town of the second class, under the orders of a Sub-Prefect, and there is a military garrison of some two thousand troops. Mr. Colounous, who passed through this place, on his journey " Across Ohrice," remarks, concerning it :- "The town, as we approached it, was lined on both sides, but especially up the north branch of the stream, prosperity and business. The town in fact work of all descriptions can be executed by the had a more thriving look than any we passed since Wu-chau. It is built on slightly rising ground, so that the houses, of well-built brick work, riseabove each other." He adds that the streets, though narrow, are for the most part well built. No doubt it is a considerable centre of trade, but its importance has been greatly reduced owing to the Mahomedan and Taiping rebellions, which resulted in the depopulation of vast districts and numerous towns along the West River in Kwang-si, and also caused the diversion of much of the earrying trade between Yunnan and Canton to the route by the Yangtsze river. Pê-se is no great distance from Tonquin, South Yunnan, but as it is inaccessible to any but native craft, and as the imposts on trade are very heavy on the West River, it is doubtful whether this point can be profitably reached for some time to come, If the trade were only fostered, and freed from the squeezing by the officials, it would soon develops. But is this likely under the present rule? The best that we can hope for is that the Chinese Government will consent pumps by the force of the sea in one of the gales to open up the waterways of the Two Kwang provinces to stoamer navigation as far as a light draught boat can penetrate. This would lead to a considerable expansion of trade with this Colony, and would also at

Mr. Lesch said he thought not. It was matter of everyday practice. He then came to the real substantial point of the case, and that was as to the law bearing upon a case of a person coming to court and seeking to set aside or re-open a foreclosure order after it had been made absolute. He submitted that the cases cited by his learned friend mostly had no bearing upon the present case. The case was one in which there was an irregularity, but the final order for foreolosure was made, and there was no authority but one which would guide the court in such a case, and that was the case of Patch and Ward which had been referred to by his learned friend, on which he mainly relied. The other case to which Mr. Francis had referred only showed the circumstances under which a foreclosure could be reopened, but they did not in any way interfere with the ruling of the Court of Appeal in the case of Patch v. Ward one iota, as had been contended by Mr. Francis. This case was brought, as he understood, on three grounds—the unavoidable absence of the mortgager from the colony. the value of the property at the time it was foreclosed, and the irregularity of the proceedings. He contended that the case of Patch and Ward have been arrested at Boherbue, County Cork. showed that the irregularity was not sufficient to justify the re-opening of the foreelesure; and in this case he very much doubted whether his Lordship would be inclined to help the mortgagor, or the creditors who were represented by Mr. Wise, when he had not appeared at the hearing of the case, and his representative was present, and did nothing. The mortgagor was absent from the colony from the result of his own speculations. At the date of the final foreclosure, which was the important date for the purposes of this action, the property, as he should show, was not worth $275,000, but instead only between $200,000 and $210,000. That, he thought, did away with the contentions as to value. It had been said by his learned triend that his clients would lose nothing if the failing to comply with the port regulations, inast third time within a year that this volcano has tion against Albion.
